"We have a lake in our back yard..."

In 1836

, the first home was erected "on higher ground and healthy pines" of Eutaw Village. Planters along the Santee River had long sought and found refuge for their families from humidity, mists, and mosquitoes. Pine Lands near enough to allow occasional trips to their homes were particularly favored, so planters of Upper St. Johns Parrish, Berkeley, chose such a spot near the bubbling Eutaw Springs. Since "Eutaw" in the Catawba Indian language means "Pine Tree", the name was quite appropriate for their summer village. After the building of the first home, which, for a time, became the Episcopal Rectory, Eutaw Village grew steadily. Summer houses were built in close proximity and a private school was established. In 1849 the village chapel of Epiphany Episcopal Church was erected. Outside news came mostly by courier from St. Stephen in 1878.

In 1884, a three-mile square, approximately, was incorporated as the town of Eutawville, thus including the few homes and stores west of the village proper. Then in 1886, the railroad came through, put its station a half mile west of the area known as The Village, and thus formed the nucleus of a more-or-less separate community. Later another railroad ran from the A.C.L. station to a huge lumber mill at Ferguson on the Santee River causing the new community to grow rapidly.

Soon the Post Office was moved from the village to the "town", a public school was built, and church services provided for Methodists, Baptists, Lutherans, and Episcopalians. The original village and the newer "town" grew to be one large community with several hotels, a telephone exchange, a bank, two doctors, a livery stable, a bricked up watering fountain, a bar, and police protection. But in 1912, the mill at Ferguson ceased operation and many people began drifting away. Today the summer houses are either gone or rebuilt as permanent homes, and Eutawville boasts a population of about 600 souls, many of whom are descendants of the original settlers. Some are here because most, if not all, of their river property was inundated by the waters of Lake Marion. "Lake Houses" dot the waterside, and water sports and fishing are now the centers of recreation. Several Nationally acclaimed Golf Courses can be found in nearby Santee, S.C. about 10 miles northwest up Hwy 6.

General Francis Marion hero of the American Revolution lived five miles from Eutawville Eutawville is blessed with a nearby recreational facility. Lake Marion, which is part of the Santee Cooper system offers year-round access and use, from fishing to hunting, to watersports it is an ideal family recreational area.

History abounds in the Eutawville area. From the Eutaw Springs Battlefield park in nearby Eutaw Springs, to the tomb of Francis Marion fifteen miles down Hwy 6. Several plantations dating from the early 1800's are also in the neighborhood.

While in the area explore our many Restaurants and retail establishments. We have Antique dealers, restaurants, motels, service companies, and more.

The ruins of the old Santee Cypress Lumber Company are still visible at the waters edge on Ferguson Island.
